News and Views

Ki Tavo begins with a focus on the Jewish people's imminent arrival in the land of Israel. The culmination of the Exodus from Egypt and forty years wandering in the desert. Moshe tells them of the bounty that awaits them if they keep God's commandments, with the classic framing of Israel as a land flowing with milk and honey'.

But to hammer this message home, he warns them of the curses and terrible misfortune that could befall them should they forsake the way of God.

Upon conclusion, Moshe reminds them of their origin story as a nation: "You have seen all that God did before your very eyes in the land of Egypt, to Pharaoh... the wondrous feats that you saw with your own eyes, those prodigious signs and marvels."

Moshe is cognisant that when the Jews enter Israel, the miraculous life they experienced in the desert would cease. Moshe is embedding into his reflections key messages to guide them through their transition into conquering and then living in the Land of Israel.

He is reminding them that, just as God helped them succeed in battle before, He will continue to help them settle the land, both when they need to vanquish their enemies and when they are able to live peacefully there.
